ATTN JUDGE JOHN ADAMS

- Thank you for a very interesting article on the First Energy settlement and continuing issues! From the beginning I have had questions which don't seem to be addressed or of any concern:
 - Why aren't any of the Board of Directors being sued or penalized for their lack of oversight on 60,000,000 of illegal payments? The SEC uses claw backs in various situations where there are issues like this. It is hard to believe no one on the Board was aware of these illegal payments and questioned whether they were legitimate business expenses.
 - Donald T. Misheff occupied the position of Non-Executive Chairman at First Energy Corp. From a review of websites Donald is a CPA and former managing partner at Ernst & Young in Akron. Wouldn't he not only have the expertise but also be in a position to be aware of the 60,000,000 in illegal payments?
 - Ernst & Young audited the financial statements of First Energy. What is their role in overlooking or missing payments and what discussions did they have with Misheff, their former managing partner?
 - What about the First Energy board members who were on the Audit committee including Misheff - Were they aware of these payments or were they negligent in noticing 60,000,000?

Anyways it seems like Judge John Adams has at least raised other questions and isn't taking this lightly. Feel free to forward any of these questions to him or the court if you feel they are relevant to the case and proposed settlement.

Thanks
