

Arlena Barnes was a senior negotiating attorney for the Bonneville Power Administration. The Bonneville Power Administration is a self-financing agency of the United States Department of Energy that markets and transmits hydroelectric and other power generated in the Pacific Northwest.

She was the lead negotiating attorney for regional hydropower agreements, including the Pacific Northwest Coordination Agreement, as well as the designated legal representative for the agency's Y2K Initiative. She specialized in construction, operation, finance, and risk management issues of the Federal hydroelectric system.

She is active in the leadership of the Section of Environment, Energy and Resources (SEER) of the American Bar Association (ABA). She has held the position of Publications Officer and served on the Executive Committee.

Currently, she is a member of the ABA Journal Board of Editors and the ABA Standing Committee on the Law Library of Congress. In addition, she is a Fellow of the American Bar Foundation.

She is an active alumna of Vassar College, where she has been appointed to the Advisory Council for Photography for Vassar's Cultural Center.

She earned a B.A. from the University of Denver, a J.D. from Harvard Law School, and a M.P.P. from Harvard's Kennedy School. She received an Executive Scholar Certificate in Nonprofit Management from the Kellogg School of Management at Northwestern University.